

Nadia Brigham is principal of Brigham Consulting, LLC with over 20 years of experience advancing racial equity, leadership and community engagement in philanthropy, youth-serving and grassroots organizations, particularly focused on racial equity, leadership development and community engagement for education justice, health equity, and family economic security. She's a strategist, focused on moving leaders and organizations from awareness and knowledge acquisition to agency and action towards more equitable outcomes. Not secondarily, supporting leaders in examining and interrogating manifestations of internalized anti-Blackness and internalized superiority within themselves and creating pathways to healing is critical to her work. Foundational is the building of authentic relationships through powerful community engagement strategies, that result in the acknowledgement and celebration of all humanity, a critically necessary component for organizational transformation and positive outcomes for clients and stakeholders.
